

March 31, 1999

Mr. Senator Craig,

Has been there a scientist, an engineer or a scholar who worked in order to support conscientiously any execution of innocent people? I believe such a scientist, engineer or scholar has not lived.

Unfortunately, politicians and statesmen who conscientiously organized and ordered an execution of innocent people have overloaded the history. We are witnesses of such politicians and their results even at the end of the second millenium.

We, scientists, engineers and scholars, like artists, have been devoted to contributing peacefully to the advancement of the humankind. We are concentrated on solving scientific and/or engineering and/or teaching problems and tasks in order to achieve such contributions. We present our results with our trust that politicians will exploit them for the goodness of people. We hope the politicians are at least equally human and wise. Unfortunately, such a claim fails. "Unfortunately" becomes "tragically" when the politicians escape from the permitted frontier of their actions.

I am writing to you because leading governing statesmen have largely gone out from the civilized life, from the human permitted frame of their behavior, moves, actions and orders during last week.

I would greatly appreciate your time to read the next text written for brief in order to try halting the enormous tragedy in my dear native land. Your frank thoughts and hopefully human support are welcome. The human support you might provide is to help stopping the crime against the humanity and peace as much as you can. If you wish to learn more, please do not hesitate to let me know.

I stay grateful to you for your peaceful fair engagement and thank you very much in advance.

Lyubomir T. Gruyitch